12. Content and data inconsistencies to preserve during replica planning

The live website includes a mixture of Airwin-specific information and apparent generic Webflow/template content. For a faithful replica, keep these differences documented instead of silently rewriting them.

- Company age: The company description says established in 2001 and “more than two decades”; another homepage section says “Over 25 years of experience.” The About page says “20 years” in its article title.
- Brand naming: Airwin Logistics, Airwin Cargo, and “Logimax” all appear.
- Template references: “The ultimate Webflow template for agencies startups, and small businesses” and the Peqone design credit appear in the footer.
- Generic feature copy: “Cloud based,” “Technical support,” “Service Agency,” and “Unique method” have placeholder-style descriptions.
- Generic business copy: Several “win-win survival strategies” paragraphs are unrelated to cargo services.
- Generic team data: Salman Islam, Janes Cooper and James Bond are displayed with Developer, Designer and Creator roles; About page testimonials include Janes Cooper, Jack Daniel and Ava Olivia.
- Unrelated statistics: About page statistics say “Designers and developers” and “Awards for digital innovation.”
- Generic pricing: Starter, Commercial and Enterprise plans are shown with monthly dollar prices and template-related feature names.
- Unrelated global addresses: The Contact page shows generic America, Canada and Great Britain branch blocks with sample contact details.
- Typos and grammar: Examples include “Logistic,” “gloabl,” “Vetures,” “Wa want to help,” “fingertrips,” “buildup,” “Mangement,” “Exicutive,” “Templaes,” “Analysing,” “Gurantee,” “Affrodable,” “commited,” and “MEASSAGE.” They have been retained in this archive where they appear as visible source text.

13. Coverage and verification notes

Pages directly opened and text captured:

- Homepage
- About
- Services
- News & Updates listing
- Careers
- Contact
- Tracking
- All seven article URLs visible in the News & Updates listing

Known limitations:

- `sitemap.xml` and `robots.txt` were not accessible through the browsing source during this capture.
- The Privacy Policy link is visible in the homepage quote area, but its destination was not resolved in the extracted navigation.
- Image-based text, image alt text beyond what the extractor surfaced, video/showreel content, animations, mobile-only menus, hidden states, form validation, submission outcomes, external booking/tracking systems and API responses are not fully represented in this text archive.
- Some pages were reported as crawled recently; the Contact page extraction was last crawled earlier than the other pages. Verify operational phone numbers, email addresses, job listings, statistics and footer copyright against the live site before publishing.
- The text extraction output showed malformed emoji glyphs in the Logistics Management article. The PDF/Markdown preserve the visible extracted representation rather than guessing the original emoji.

Use for replica development: Treat this archive as the content inventory and page-by-page reference. For exact visual replication, separately inspect screenshots, image assets, responsive layouts, typography, spacing, hover states, scroll animations and form behaviour in a browser.
